It seems that the cost of the production of the two kinds of gas, that made from coal and that from naptha, is as 88 4-100 to 48 5-100. In other words, the new gas costs very nearly one-half less than that made by former methods from coal. Such ganization, polity and doctrine intact, facts are of infinite value to progressive, enterprising towns like Water Valley, Meridian and Oxford, showing, as they do, that rates of insurance may be so lessened by substituting cheap gas for coal oil that gasworks cost less than nothing.
